■ AI Morning Brief

Good morning, it's Tuesday, June 09, 2026, and we're starting the day with clear skies and a pleasant 79.7°F in Bedford, NH, although it's expected to dip to 53.6°F later. The market is seeing a mixed bag today, with GOOGL being the top gainer at 0.28%, while RIVN took a significant hit of 6.98%. You'll notice that the Big 5 stocks are mostly in the red, with AAPL down 3.38% and MSFT down 1.84%, while NVDA managed to stay relatively stable with a 0.26% gain. On the crypto side, BTC and ETH are both down, at 1.96% and 2.55% respectively, which is consistent with the overall market sentiment. The news is abuzz with AI-related headlines, particularly the potential IPO of OpenAI, which could have significant implications for the industry. You might also want to keep an eye on the developments in the AI compute trading market, as big banks are starting to take notice. Additionally, the mental health support discussion is shifting towards a more human-centered approach, which could have interesting applications in our own work. On the project front, I'm happy to report that the DreOS build is now 100% complete, with all 12 phases finished. We're not currently working on any new features, but we can expect to dive into new projects soon. The Figma design file for our portfolio assets has been inactive for the past 10 days, but we can revisit it when needed. You've got a solid foundation to tackle the day ahead, so let's make the most of it and see what opportunities and challenges come our way.
